ALTO ADIGE

Colterenzio is a small area on the outskirts of Alto Adige, with a rich tradition of winemaking that dates back centuries. As early as 1200, its lands and wines were recognized with the appellation of "vinum schrepphulensis," referring to the region.

Founded in 1960, Schreckbichl Colterenzio is one of the newest wineries in Alto Adige, and it benefits from the collective efforts of over 300 families working behind the scenes of the winery. Spanning over 300 hectares, Colterenzio's estate boasts a diverse range of vineyards, cultivating 14 different grape varieties at altitudes ranging from 230 to 650 meters. In 2009, the winery's cellar underwent a complete renovation, making it energy self-sufficient.

TRENTINO

Cantina Toblino was founded in 1960 with the aim of enhancing the grapes provided by the winemakers of the Valle dei Laghi. Today, Cantina Toblino receives grapes from over 600 winegrowers, who cultivate a total of more than 850 hectares of vineyards.

Their history continues to evolve, guided by an unwavering commitment to precision and quality in vineyard management, vinification, and cellar aging. This constant pursuit of excellence remains unchanged over time. The secret to their success, both in the past and present, lies in the harmonious collaboration between their members, the winegrowers, and their vineyards. Furthermore, Cantina Toblino practices organic viticulture, embracing the principles of supporting natural processes that foster balance within the ecosystem.

It was in the hills of Nizza Monferrato that Pietro Scrimaglio established the cellar in 1920, building upon and enhancing the work of his father Francesco, who had been a winegrower since the early 1900s.

Scrimaglio has since continued its remarkable success in producing high-quality wines, remaining deeply connected to its terroir while embracing a dynamic and innovative approach. The winery combines traditional practices with the finest winemaking techniques, placing great emphasis on promoting indigenous grape varieties and showcasing their elegant, balanced, and authentic expression.

BOASSO FRANCO
AZIENDA AGRICOLA
SERRALUNGA D'ALBA
ITALY

The Boasso estate was established in the 1950s when Giuseppe returned from World War II to resume managing his lands in the Piemonte region. Today, the company boasts seven hectares of vineyards, with the most favorable and prized soils dedicated to cultivating Nebbiolo grapes, which are used to produce Barolo.

The GABUTTI vineyard spans an area of 5,000 square meters and enjoys a south-east exposure. The soil composition is highly calcareous, and its significant slope ensures excellent exposure to sunlight. Only the finest grapes from this vineyard are selected to create Barolo Gabutti.

Furthermore, the company's classic Barolo production from the Municipality of SERRALUNGA comes from vineyards located in neighboring areas.

VALDINERA

In 1988, Careglio Giuseppe founded the Valdinera Company. The vineyard is situated in Corneliano d'Alba, a beautiful location in Piedmont's Cuneo province. Valdinera proudly possesses 20 hectares of vineyards nestled in the hills, benefiting from excellent sun exposure and offering a distinct terroir for each grape variety.

For four generations, Valdinera has been producing wine using grapes sourced from their vineyards in the Roero region. A notable characteristic of the landscape is the presence of 'the Rocche', which are deep chasms in the hills that can reach significant height differences of hundreds of meters. These features contribute to the unique and captivating essence of the wines crafted by Valdinera.

In the mid-1990s, Michele's sons, Alberto and Ezio, embarked on an estate renovation project. Their efforts were dedicated to enhancing grape production methodologies and refining the quality of their wines. During this period, significant attention was given to improving both the grape cultivation process and the wine aging techniques, ensuring the highest standards of excellence at the winery.

JACOPO BIONDI SANTI

In the heart of Maremma, Jacopo Biondi Santi and his sons carry on a legacy of excellence in Italian wine, ensuring its continuation for future generations. The estate's exceptional terroir and microclimatic characteristics are the key factors that contribute to the worldwide recognition and value of Biondi Santi wines. Every element, including altitude, microclimate, soil composition, and wind exposure, aligns perfectly to create exceptional wines.

The estate's 50 hectares of vineyards are exclusively dedicated to three grape varieties: Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, and Sangiovese Grosso BBS11, a historical and unique clone developed by the Biondi Santi family. The winemaking process at Castello di Montepò is characterized by meticulous attention to detail, supported by continuous scientific research.

The vineyards utilize a network of weather detection units to collect real-time data for comparative analyses, highlighting the family's commitment to research.

The aging cellar, located beneath the manor, features a distinctive exposed brick wall structure that maintains a constant temperature of around 16°C and ideal humidity for crafting exceptional red wines. Castello di Montepò not only represents a renowned brand of high-quality wine but also serves as an oenological model that showcases the superiority of Sangiovese among wines of absolute excellence.

MONTECCHIO
1848

This splendid estate once belonged to the Marquises Torigiani, an old patrician family from Florence. Montecchio's Farm is the heart of a property of about 300 hectares, in front of the medieval village of San Donato in Poggio, one of the most evocative of the Florentine Chianti Classico district, between the provinces of Florence and Siena

The Nuti family bought La Fattoria Montecchio in the 70s and from 1998 started an intense and well-structured program of investments to bring the business to the highest levels of quality. They programmed a remake of the vineyards with new low-productivity clones, high density of plants per hectare, with careful positioning of the rows to maximize the effect of the sunlight and to produce not more than one kilo of grapes per plant. The best clone selected Sangiovese grape represents the foundation of the ampelographic structure; planted beside them are also international grapes such as cabernet, sauvignon and merlot.

EMILIA ROMAGNA

Cantina Puianello was founded in 1938 in the Emilia-Romagna region of Italy, which is renowned as the heart of Lambrusco production. The winery spans across 220 hectares of land, with its vineyards strategically positioned around the hills and cultivated in accordance with the regulations of integrated and organic agriculture.

This approach allows them to produce exceptional and highly sought-after wines.

Their motto, "Cultivating the best hills of Reggio Emilia," highlights their focus on utilizing the finest hillside locations. These hills provide a favorable microclimate characterized by excellent ventilation and an optimal temperature range, shielding the vineyards from the region's humid climate and frequent fogs prevalent in the Emilian plain. The vineyards predominantly grow on calcareous and clayey soils, while the espalier training system, combined with the Guyot pruning system, is commonly employed for vine cultivation.

VENETO

Cantina Valpantena was founded in 1958 through the initiative of several local winemakers. The project quickly grew and became a cooperative, attracting a majority of the production in the area. Today, it has established itself as a strong presence in both domestic and foreign markets, allowing the community to preserve a centuries-old tradition and prioritize environmental care.

Cantina Valpantena proudly encompasses the renowned Torre del Falasco line. The brand takes its name from the legendary brigand Falasco, who roamed the valley in the 1600s and sought refuge in a small tower located in the hamlet of Stallavena. The creation of Torre del Falasco wines involves consistent, meticulous work in the vineyard, as well as a careful selection of grapes directly from the field. These practices come together to produce highly acclaimed wines that truly represent the essence of the region.

MARCHE

Le Caniette is a winery located in the Marche region of central Italy. It was founded in the 1960s by Raffaele Vagnoni, a passionate winemaker dedicated to crafting high-quality wines that showcase the distinctive terroir of the Marche region.

Today, Le Caniette is highly regarded locally and is gaining recognition worldwide. The estate spans over 20 hectares and boasts unique attributes in its vineyard. The Mediterranean microclimate, complemented by its proximity to the Balkans, creates a balanced environment for grape cultivation. The sandy soil enriched with Early Pleistocene clastic rocks further contributes to the vineyard's character.

In line with their commitment to sustainability, Le Caniette adheres to the principles of organic farming, ensuring their customers receive natural products. This dedication is reinforced by the organic certification present on each bottle.

Lo Scuro is our private label, an exclusive wine produced by the renowned Vallepiciola Winery.

The heart and soul of Azienda Agricola Vallepiciola are deeply rooted in the ancient lands of Chianti Classico, which boast a mild microclimate and breathtaking landscape, making it ideal for viticulture. The winery stretches along the eastern hillside of Castelnuovo Berardenga, near Siena, encompassing a surface area of 110 hectares divided into 12 distinct vineyard plots, each dedicated to the cultivation of 7 different grape varieties.

The vineyards thrive in soils comprising clay, calcareous marl, bluish marl, tuff, sandstone, or sand, and are strategically positioned in the hilly areas to the left of the Arbia River. Through meticulous vineyard management and a focus on low and concentrated yields, they obtain top-quality grapes that are rich in aromatic compounds. With state-of-the-art winemaking equipment, the winery is able to accentuate the varietal aromas and flavors of the grapes, crafting a diverse range of wines that showcase both strong personality and elegant characteristics.
